CYB 200 Project Three Scenario Three

You are a student taking classes at your local university, where you are enrolled in a cybersecurity program. You are anticipating the results of your midterm grade, which your English professor promised would be posted on their door by noon on Friday. When you check the door you are distraught to see a generic, printed report from the grading system with the following information for each student:

- Name
- Student ID
- Email address
- Social Security number
- Home address
- List of all the grades to date in the class, including the midterm grades

As a cybersecurity student, you are not happy with this report, and you remove it from the door while other people are trying to see their grades. You bring the report to the professor and ask them why they posted so much information. The professor does not see anything wrong with their actions.
